place. This action is necessary to protect the survivors from pestilence and because the ground is too wet to permit of digging graves. Ghouls have been doing their work and dead bodies are being stripped of jewelry and val-

with supplies as rapidly as possible. Outside Galveston smaller towns are beginning to send in reports as telegraphic communication improves and many additions to the list of dead and property losses are received.

The railroads will suffer millions of dollars in actual damage to say nothing of the loss from stoppige from business. The international and Great Northern and Santa Fe have miles of track washed out and the bridges connecting Galveston with the mainland must be entirely rebuilt.

Devistation at Galveston. Late advices from Galveston show that west of Thirty-third street, the storm swept the ground perfectly clear of the residences that once stood upon it and piled them up in a conglomerated mass five blocks back on the beach, strewing the piling with the debris, and the bodies of many victims. Many of these were lying out in the sun and were frightful to look upon. The fearful work of the storm was not confined to the district along the beach, but took in all the district in the city, but it was near to the life occurred. The waves washed it is thought that the inmates, consisting of 13 orphans and three matrons were drowned. Out in the Denver resurvey the destruction was terrible, and it is thought many of the soldiers at Fort Crocket, together with a number of residents of that place were among the many victims of the storm. The government works were greatly damaged and the buildings on the beach were washed out into the gulf and their occupants are thought to have perished. In the north part

At Ariola two were killed and sevof the west end the damage was great also, almost every building being the quanters and every thing else in damaged to some extent and many are completely wrecked. number of bodies floated in from across the bay but could not be identified. Many refugees have been picked up here and taken to the Jacquehard hotel, where they are being given every possible attention. Many of hose refugees were suffering from injuries and had been in the water some time. Most of them floated in on drift and rafts and one came ashore on a plano. One hundred ammunition boxes from Camp Hawley were found near Hitchcock and a piledriver from the Huntington wharf was driven inland to within a few hundred yards of the town. The prairie is covered with drift of all kinds, dead cattle, water rraft of all sizes, buggles, wagons and such like. Searching parties had up and Boliver indicates that no one was killed in that region. There are no houses left standing at Patton. Boliface of the earth with only a few of its inhabitants left.

At Quintana, the port at the mourn of the Brazos river, there are not more than 12 houses left. No one was killed, but a number of persons were injured and everybody is in need of food, clothing and many require medical attention. Two big boats were driven inland about a mile.

Women Save a Hotel. At Surfside, a summer resort opposite Quintana, there were 75 persons in the hotel. The water was about it and the danger was from the heavy logs floating from above. Only a few men work in the villa, so a number of women went into the water to their waists and assisted in keeping the logs away from the hotel and no one

Crops Destroyed. At Sartatita the Ellis sugar plantation is a ruin. Thousands of acres of cane and cotton are said to be nearly without value. The big sugar house is damaged to the amount of several thousand dollars. The tenant houses are down and the damage outside of the crops is estimated at $80,000. There are five houses left standing The cotton fields are stripped clean.

Boer War Ended. Washington, Sept. 12 .- The following dispatch has been received by the war department from Captain Reichmann, the United States army officer who acompanied the Boers in their campaigns, as military observer: "Events have required the departure of the attaches from the Transvaal. possible The citizens of Galveston are straining every nerve to clear the ground and secure from beneath the debris the bodies of human beings and animals and to get rid of them. It is a task of great magnitude and is attended with untold difficulties. There is a shortage of horses to haul the dead and a shortage of willing hands to perform the gruesome work. When it become apparent that it would be impossible to bury the dead, even in trenches, arrangements were made to take them to sea. Barges and tugs quickly made ready for the purpose but it was difficult to get men to do the work. The city's firemen worked hard in bringing bodies to the wharf, but outside of them were few who helped. Rev. Father Kirwin, who went out to summon men for the work reported that it was impossible to get any considerable number and urged that able-bodied men be impressed. Soldiers and policemen were sent out and every able-bodied man they found was marched to the wharf front. The men were worked in relays and were liberally, but not too plentifully supplied with stimulants to nerve them for their task. Three barge loads containing about 700 human bodies were sent to sea where they were

The majority of these men were negroes, but there were also whites who took part in the were natives and some had been allowed to go over from the mainland under the guise of "relief" work. Not only did they rob the dead, but they mutilated bodies in order to secure ghoulish booty. A party of 10 negroes returning from a looting expedition had stripped corpses of all valuables and the pockets of some of the looters were fairly bulging out with fingers of the dead which had been cut off because they were so swollen the rings could not be removed. So incensed were the people at this desecration and mutilation of the dead, that the looters were shot down and it has been determined that all found in the
